

Utter rubbish!

Alphabetic nonsense which could only be described as a waste of natural resources meaningfully distributed among the many who would delightfully call their home to check on the children in the event of an emergency beyond the far side of town by the corner shop which the girl went to after she dumped her boyfriend due to an argument which nearly ended in tears for all concerned apart from the one exception to the rule which encompasses most of modern day society in such a way it is not possible to understand what the original source of information had to say on the matter being presented before the courts today.
